Webb Farmhouse

Webb Farmhouse

Farmhouse History

The Webb Farmhouse was built in the 18th century and was home to several generations of the Webb Family. The eastern portion was constructed in the early 1700s and the western section was added nearly five decades later.

Pierre du Pont acquired the Webb Farm in 1915, and the house was updated and modified during the 20th century.

In 2014, the Webb House was extensively restored by John Milner Architects, a local historic architectural firm, to highlight the original character of the house.

East Gallery

The East Gallery features the oldest part of the Webb Farmhouse, built in the early 1700s.

Highlights include:

- A variety of maps, historic imagery, and illustrations that trace the changes to this land over time
- Architectural features such as rough plaster walls and period oak wood flooring
- An exhibit library

West Gallery

The West Gallery depicts the Meadow Garden through the seasons. Art, including sculpture, herbarium specimens, photography, and illustrations, shows the Meadow as it changes through the seasons and highlights our year-round stewardship of this Garden.

Architectural Points of Note

During renovation of the Webb House, a walk-in cooking fireplace was discovered in the East Gallery and was restored. Additionally, original details include a restored pent roof and a retained doorframe between the older and newer sections of the house.
